

Input from Victor Ashford (Business Strategist):

Scarlett, to capture a modern investor's attention, your proposal must prioritize market defensibility and clear ROI. Include these seven essential strategic sections:

1. The Value Proposition (The Hook): A concise statement defining the specific problem and your unique solution.
2. Market Opportunity (TAM/SAM/SOM): Data-driven analysis of the Total Addressable Market and the specific segment you will capture immediately.
3. The Business Model: A transparent breakdown of revenue streams (e.g., subscription, freemium, or data monetization) and unit economics.
4. Competitive Advantage (The Moat): A SWOT-aligned analysis identifying why competitors cannot easily replicate your offering (IP, network effects, or exclusive partnerships).
5. Go-To-Market (GTM) Strategy: A roadmap for user acquisition, including specific channels and projected Customer Acquisition Cost (CAC) vs. Lifetime Value (LTV).
6. Product Roadmap & Scalability: High-level milestones for development and how the infrastructure will handle rapid user growth.
7. The Ask & Financial Projections: Specific funding requirements and a 3-year forecast illustrating the exit strategy or path to profitability.